

SUMAA NEWSLETTER

Hi, everyone!

We're into February now, and one February festival from the West that we in Thailand like to celebrate is Valentine's Day, although some Thais also like to pay respect to Trimurti because they believe that doing so will help them achieve success, especially in their love lives. The Trimurti Shrine is in front of Central World, near the Erawan Shrine at the Ratchaprasong intersection. If you have the chance, you should go and have a look (and maybe ask for some help with your love life!) though it gets pretty crowded on Thursdays around 9.30pm.

Many of you will know that according to the Chinese zodiac, 2023 is the year of the rabbit, so for this month's episode of sà·sǒm·sàp, we've got a rabbit-related idiom for you. You can watch this at ...

SÀ·SǒM·SÀP
(ส : ส ม ด้ พ ด้)

SÀP·SÉT
( ด้ พ ด้ SET)

Have you ever seen a Thai florist or the shops by the side of the road that sell wreaths? These are made out of lots of different types of flowers, so in sàp·sét this month, we explain how to talk about trees and flowers in Thai. Be sure to check it out !

